

Welcome to an EBA-seminar about:

OWNERSHIP IN A NEW ERA OF DEVELOPMENT COOPERATION

 Tuesday, 18 December 2018, 14:00-15:30

 Hörsalen, Medelhavsmuséet, Fredsgatan 2, Stockholm

What happens to ownership when development cooperation increasingly moves from bilateral relations to broader cooperation with a multitude of actors involved?

Ownership is linked to effectiveness and sustainability in development cooperation, as has been stated in the Paris declaration and Agenda 2030. That a country should lead and own its development is an important principle in Swedish development cooperation.

For ownership to remain a guiding principle in development cooperation, we need to find new ways of working and governing it, according to a new report published by The Expert Group for Aid Studies.

Seeking balanced ownership in changing development cooperation relationships explores Sweden's approach to ownership and gives substantial recommendations for policy and practice. The study also includes two country case studies; Liberia and Rwanda, both partner countries for Swedish development cooperation.

At this seminar the report will be presented, followed by a panel discussion with representatives from, among others, the Swedish Ministry for Foreign Affairs and Sida.
